

1. Describe what Hibernate is and what it is used for.

Hibernate is a framework that allows to relate our Java code with a database, through the configuration of an XML file.

Basically, it makes a connection between the attributes of a database and the objects that we generally use when programming in Java.